

Lynda and Stewart Resnick

Lynda and Stewart Resnick have a venerable history of charitable involvement and philanthropic generosity. Based in Los Angeles, they own and manage Roll International Corporation and its companies, including POM Wonderful, Teleflora, FIJI Water, Wonderful Pistachios, Cuties, and Paramount Agricultural Companies. Through their companies and the Resnick Family Foundation, these visionaries are committed to preserving and protecting the environment, supporting essential education programs, and improving the communities where their employees live and work.

The Resnicks' support of the arts in Los Angeles is significant. Lynda joined LACMA's Board of Trustees in 1992 and serves in leadership positions as Vice Chair on the Executive Committee and Chair of the Acquisitions Committee, as well as a longtime steward of the Collectors Committee. Over the years, LACMA's encyclopedic collection has been the recipient of the Resnicks' extensive patronage through support for the acquisition of countless works, as well as promised gifts of masterpieces from their esteemed private collection. The Resnicks' combined passion for the arts and generosity has been transformative to the museum and the many audiences it serves.

The Lynda and Stewart Resnick Exhibition Pavilion is their latest and most exceptional effort toward helping LACMA realize its place as both an international art destination as well as a treasure for the Los Angeles community.
